If you edit outside of Google Photos (in phone or with special software) you must then place the files in a location which Google Photos searches

In this way they'll end up in your on-line storage

Even after you upload them you may do some editing

Culled and edited pictures must be stored in a place searched by Google Photos in order to use Google Photos features:

- Sharing
- Editing
- Searching
- Detailed information

Sharing with Google Photos

You must have a (free) Google account

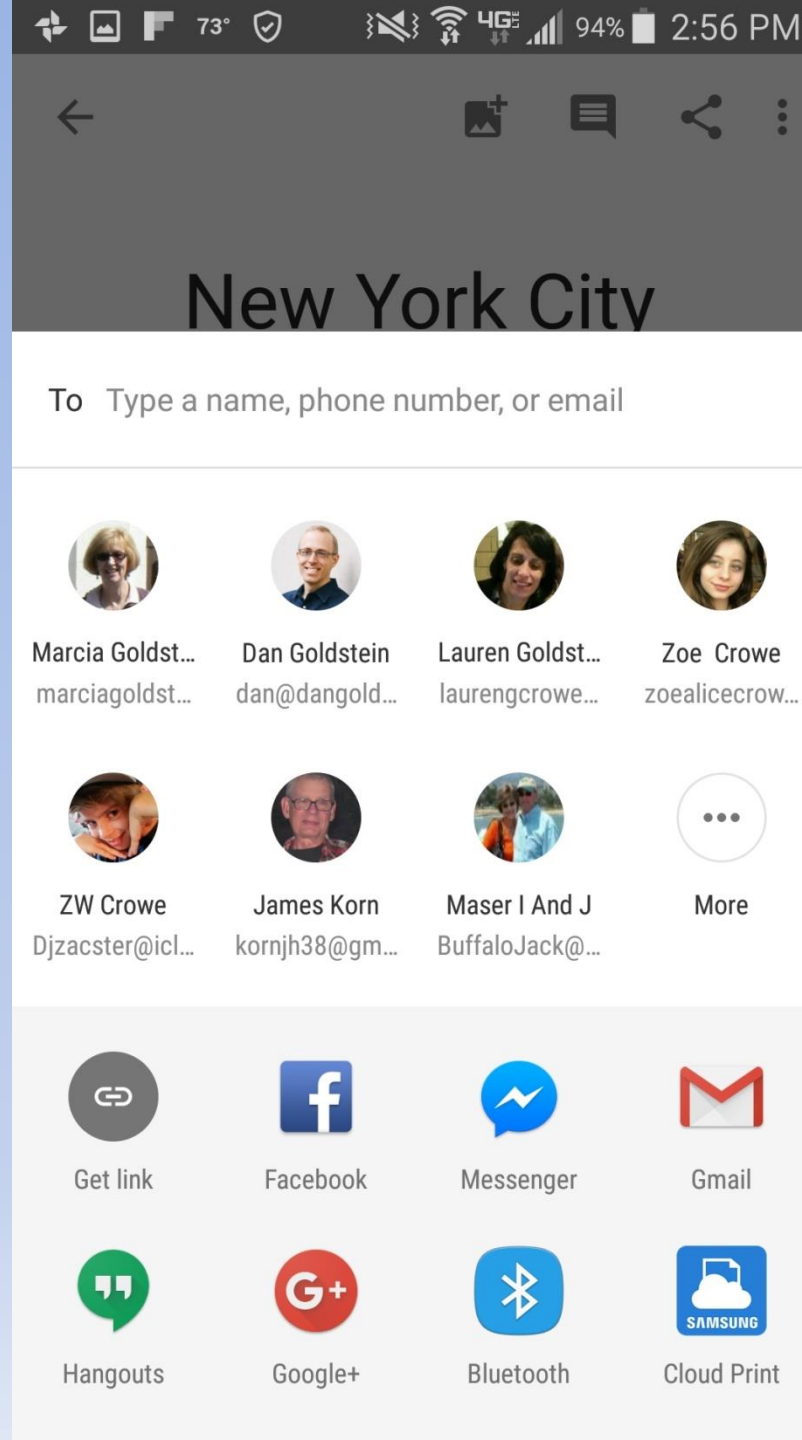

Sending link to a group allows sharing many photos to many people easily

Easiest if recipient email addresses are in Google Contacts

Some common sharing icons:

Android phone sharing options

Google Photos has amazing search capabilities using artificial intelligence.

Can search on a face, name, place, object, even a mood or adjective.

Look what a search for “bird” produced
